

The FCC's original interpretation of the TCPA, 7 FCCR 8752, at paragraph 55 fails to state that consumers have a private right of action in state courts. This should be made clear. Also, a fair reading of the TCPA does require an enabling statute for each state, either a specific statute or an existing state statute that would allow a consumer to file under state law for an intrastate violation